

Reflection

Working on this assignment helped me practice using jQuery methods like `.show()`, `.hide()`, `.text()`, `.val()`, and `.fadeIn()/fadeOut()`. Compared to plain JavaScript DOM manipulation, jQuery made the code shorter and easier to read.

One issue I encountered was forgetting to hide all ticket-type fields before showing the correct one, which caused multiple sets of fields to remain visible. Adding a single line to hide all sections before showing the relevant one fixed the problem. Overall, this reinforced how useful jQuery is for handling interactive form-based web pages quickly.
