While working on this assignment, I learned how AJAX can fetch and display data dynamically without reloading a webpage. Parsing XML required careful handling of child nodes and values, which was initially a challenge. Another issue I faced was making sure old data was cleared before displaying new results, otherwise rows would stack up incorrectly. Overall, the project helped me understand how client-side JavaScript interacts with server-side data, and how asynchronous requests improve user experience.